HIPAA SUMMIT OVERVIEW

Over 2000 years ago, the Hippocratic Oath was first committed to writing, and ever since privacy has been an integral part of the practice of medicine. But what would Hippocrates have to say about ransomware attacks, state-sponsored hacks of health entity networks, and smartphone cameras in the operating room? Ensuring health information privacy and security compliance has never been more challenging, with new threats regularly emerging, and old threats like curiosity and carelessness never having gone away.

In 1996, Congress enacted the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996, which included a subtitle titled “Administrative Simplification.” But complying with HIPAA has become anything but simple. The Privacy Rule continues to raise a range of challenging issues: How does HIPAA apply to different types of employee health plans? How can organizations find and respond to employee privacy breaches? How does the Privacy Rule fit with confidentiality laws governing substance use disorder patient records, the FTC’s enforcement authority, and new international privacy laws?

Compliance with the Security Rule has never been more important, as the healthcare sector continues to become an increasing target of cybersecurity threats. Organizations need to understand what the government is looking for in a risk analysis, how to manage more and smarter computing devices within their walls, and how to stop staff from clicking on dangerous email links and attachments. Availability of information has become a higher priority, as more criminals move from trying to access and sell data to instead ransoming access to the data. More c-suites are waking up to information security as a major patient safety issue.

And let’s not forget the focus of “Administrative Simplification” that launched all of this. Transactions standards, code sets, and new operating rules continue to form the foundation of compliance.

The HIPAA Summit is the place to go to stay on top of all of this and more. You will receive practical information to improve compliance with HIPAA and other privacy and security laws governing health information. The HIPAA Summit will bring together current and former regulators from the Office for Civil Rights, the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, the Federal Trade Commission, the Office of the National Coordinator for Health Information Technology, and the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration. You will hear from thought leaders and practitioners at some of the nation’s top health care systems and health plans. The HIPAA Summit will include sessions on HIPAA enforcement initiatives, audit programs, opportunities to hear privacy and security officers share best practices, and lessons on what challenges are to come and how to tackle them.

We look forward to you joining us as we tackle today and tomorrow biggest healthcare privacy and security challenges together.
